Barcelona, 16 September 2026. EADA Business School's International MBA has received dual international recognition in two of the world's leading rankings for postgraduate business education: the LinkedIn Top MBA Programs 2026 and the Bloomberg Businessweek MBA Ranking 2026. In both rankings, EADA has recorded the most significant advances among Spanish business schools, placing its programme alongside some of the world's most recognised institutions.

LinkedIn Top MBA Programs 2026: #54 worldwide and biggest rise among Spanish schools

EADA's International MBA has climbed 15 places - from #69 to #54 worldwide - in the LinkedIn Top MBA Programs 2026, the biggest rise recorded among all Spanish business schools. This places the programme in direct competition with leading global elite programmes, headed by Stanford GSB, Harvard Business School and Wharton. The result is particularly significant given the nature of the ranking: LinkedIn measures the actual career progression of graduates, including promotions achieved, employer quality and the strength of their professional network.

"These results are not simply an institutional recognition; they reflect the professional success of our graduates in the global market. The fact that LinkedIn, the platform that measures the reality of the labour market, places us among the 54 best MBAs in the world, with the biggest rise among Spanish schools, is the strongest endorsement we can offer to those who trust us to help them take the next step in their careers," says Jordi Díaz, Director General and Dean of EADA Business School.

Bloomberg Businessweek MBA Ranking 2026: Biggest Rise and #2 in Learning Experience in Europe
