EADA Business School ranks among the world's Top 25 in Open Programmes

- The prestigious British ranking published by the Financial Times places EADA Business School 22nd worldwide in the Open Programmes category, reaffirming the strength and international reach of its executive education offering.
- The institution also maintains its position among the world's top 50 business schools for customised corporate education, ranking 49th globally in the Custom Programmes category.

Barcelona, 18 May 2026. EADA Business School has strengthened its position among the world's leading business schools, according to the Executive Education 2026 ranking published today by the Financial Times. Once again, the institution remains among the best business schools worldwide in the Open Programmes category, reaching 22nd place globally in this year's edition.

This result reinforces EADA's role in executive education in Spain, its international outlook and the strength of a programme portfolio focused on leadership, general management and business transformation, featuring flagship programmes such as the Sustainability PAD, the General Management Programme (PDG), and a range of specialised executive development and leadership programmes.

At the same time, the ranking also publishes the global classification for the Custom Programmes category, where EADA continues to feature among the world's top 50 business schools, ranking 49th globally.

PRESS RELEASE

The ranking, compiled annually by the Financial Times, evaluates a range of indicators related to academic excellence and the learning experience, including faculty quality, innovation in learning methodologies, the diversity and international profile of participants, as well as institutional environment and infrastructure.

“Remaining among the world’s leading schools in executive education is recognition of a 69-year track record supporting executives and organisations,” says Miquel Roselló, Director of Executive Education at EADA Business School. He also highlights that “our institution was founded specifically to respond to the needs of the business world, and today we continue to adapt to an increasingly demanding and fast-changing global environment through both our executive education programmes and our tailored corporate training solutions.”

About EADA Business School

EADA Business School was founded in 1957 by a group of business leaders and professionals as an institution independent both ideologically and financially. Recognised by leading international rankings such as the Financial Times, EADA holds the prestigious EQUIS accreditation as well as AMBA accreditation, which recognises the quality of its MBA programmes.

Over the past decade, the institution has made a strong commitment to sustainability, promoting both research and education in this critical area. In 2017, EADA launched its first programme in corporate sustainability, the Master in Sustainability and Business Innovation, pioneering in both Spain and Europe. Since then, drawing on cutting-edge research and the expertise of its academic team, the school has developed five specialised programmes in sustainable business. The Leading What Matters manifesto defines the purpose and mission of EADA Business School.
